Aslan:

Platte Valley Irrigation Co (PVIC) wishes to express our sincere gratitude for your recent efforts at our Sand Hill Lake discharge facility. The project came in well under budget and ahead of schedule. The quality of the work was excellent. It just doesn't get much better.

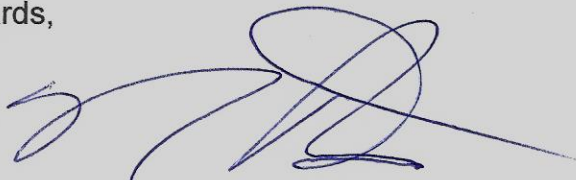

Aslan's ability to work with our engineering staff as a partner was notable. Your people were part of the team, contributing ideas and suggestions all along the way. I personally observed several instances where Aslan suggestions and pushback resulted in an improved project. PVIC tried to insure that all parties (i.e. design engineers, materials engineers, the State Engineers Office, and PVIC) were involved throughout the project design and execution phases. Aslan certainly stepped up to the challenge, and the project benefited as a result.

During the construction phase, Aslan staff efficiencies were on display. Each time I visited the site, it was evident what the priorities were, and it was clear that staff had definite goals and direction. I did not witness a work stoppage, waiting on materials or personnel. It is evident that site managers were on top of all aspects of the effort, and planned ahead each day.

Minor issues during construction were corrected almost immediately. The concept of "good enough" does not seem to be part of Aslan's culture. I was particularly impressed with elements involving hand cement work at critical connections in our project. These were completed with precision and attention to functionality. I am confident that the longevity of our facility has been enhanced as a result.

Once again, PVIC would like to thank Aslan for your efforts. You are at the top of our preferred contractor list. Please feel free to share this letter with prospective clients, and do not hesitate to provide my contact information as appropriate.

Regards,

Norm Anderson
Vice President, Platte Valley Irrigation Co.
